In the third quarter, Auto-Graphics began development of a next generation Rich Internet Application (RIA) user interface for the complete AGent™ product line including AGent Resource Sharing™, AGent VERSO™ and AGent Search™. The RIA interface, leverages AGent's open system architecture to create a visually engaging and interactive application, which deploys consistently across all browsers, desktops and operating systems for an improved user experience. The company is working with libraries facing difficult economic or budgetary times to expand functionality of library systems by offering the new user interface along with other user centric tools through a program that spans across the entire AGent product line. The program exemplifies why for over 20 years the company's Software as a Service (SaaS) business model has been successful with customers facing budgetary concerns or constraints.
